The death of Edwin Booth removes the last of a race of distinguished actors who have held the public attention and admiration for nearly three-quarters of a century. It was in 1821 that Junius Brutus Booth came to the United States from England, where he had already be n recognized for his genius as well as his eccentricities. Since then the stage has been graced by the presence of his three sons, Edwin, Junius Brutus and John Wilkes, the latter of whom was unhappily the assassin of President Lin-

Of all the family, Edwin filled the argest space in public attention and in the affections of the people. Through-out his career he has been distinguished for his amiability as much as for his renius. Of late years, especially since 375,000 Per Day. of Macready in England, he has been acknowledged as the leading Englishspeaking actor, not only of the American stage, but of the world, in tragedy and in the higher class of dramas. His personations of Hamlet and Richelleu were particularly popular, and there was about him a personality which always secured aim as indulgent and admiring

> Some persons did not agree, however, in the high estimate placed upon Edwin Booth as an actor. They discovered the all books and accounts relating forts, and regarded his Hamlet, which was so generally admired, as stilted and stagey." Indeed, it is doubtless true that of late years the deceased lost much of the spirit by which his performances were distinguished in his earlier life. But no one who ever saw "The Fool's Revenge," can fail to acknowledge his remarkable dramatic

His death leaves a vacancy in the walks of the drama. Will it soon be filled? Are not the days of the Forests, Macreadys and Booths gone by, and does not the public taste, when it "that the not actual, bona fide, paid cir- reaches higher than vaudeville and variety shows, seek sensationalism and

The President's announcement of his intention to call an extra session of Congress in September has been well reselved by the New York banks. The officers of such institutions express satisfaction at the clear, emphatic terms in which Mr. Cleveland's decision is stated. The President of the Chemical Bank says: "Mr. Cleveland did not make the ituation; he had to take it as he found it. I have every confidence in the present Administration's financial policy, and am satisfied that Mr. Cleveland will do the best he can to improve the financial situation."

While President Cleveland will doubtless do his whole duty, and will seek to 'improve the financial situation,"it is for Congress to act. It needs no argument after he had gone. o satisfy the people that the remedy for the present embarrassment is the repeal of the law which obliges the Government to use the gold the nation seeds for the purchase of idle silver which it has no use. But Congress must pass the repealing act.

Meanwhile there is work for others, and especially our bankers, to do. As Mr. Cleveland says, much depends upon the action of those engaged in financial operations and business enterprises. We have resources abundantly sufficient to prevent embarrassment to the Government. If these are used as they ought to be used, and if those engaged n financial operations and business enterprises will, as Mr. Cleveland says, contribute their share of hope and steadfastness, they will do a patriotic act, and at the same time protect their wn interests. The bankers and financiers of the city admit that President Cleveland does his duty. Are they ready to do theirs?
